Difference between college vs high school: The one thing I’d probably say is the major difference between college and high school is that in college you have to, in many ways, hold yourself accountable for your own pursuits in life. Nobody is really going to hold your hand and walk you through school and life in general. It’s up to you to find the best ways to manage your time between studying, working, and finding ways to have a vibrant social life. Oh and you learn pretty quick how to do your own laundry and clean after yourself, your parents aren’t always going to be there for you. The one thing I really enjoy about college is that it is a place where you get to explore your creativity and meet so many like-minded people while doing so, as cliché as that sounds. You can literally learn about anything. So if math, science, or history isn’t really your thing don’t worry because there’s something out there for you. Personally, one of the most interesting classes I’ve taken is Chicano Studies where I learned all about the intersectional identities that we as people carry and what it truly means to be a Mexican-American today in society. College really broadens your perspective about the world. Life isn’t really just about the latest drama happening around the halls like the fact that Glenn Coco got four candy grams and Gretchen Wieners didn’t get any.
Advice to Avid Students: The biggest advice I could give you all is not to stress about the little things, you don’t have to have your life figured out right now. I know it’s scary but stay positive and work hard in everything you do, it’ll all work out in the end. Do your tutorial forms and binder checks (I wasn’t paid to say this) but really stay organized. Take time for yourself to really think what it is you want to do with your life after high school and whatever it is that you do end up doing, know that all your teachers will always be there to back you up. You’re not alone in all of this, so if you ever need help don’t be afraid to ask.[Anyways you got this, go crush it!] Oh and thanks Avila and AVID for everything you do!
